

To: Joint Steering Committee for Development of RDA
From: John Attig, ALA Representative
Subject: Revision of RDA 11.2.2: Heads of State and Heads of Government

In its response to the list of “Issues Deferred until after the First Release of RDA” [6JSC/Sec/1], ALA indicated that one of our top priorities was to reconcile the separate instructions for recording the titles of heads of state and heads of government in RDA 11.2.2. In addition, ALA wanted to supply a missing instruction for formulating authorized access points for ruling executive bodies (also in RDA 11.2.2).

The following proposal is the result of the work of a Task Force appointed by CC:DA, and was approved by CC:DA on June 25, 2011.

Brief History of the Instructions

The specific rules for heads of state and colonial governors were introduced in 1949, for heads of government in 1967, and for heads of international intergovernmental organizations in 1978. In RDA, the official language of the jurisdiction is used to create the access point for heads of government, but the language preferred by the agency creating the data is used for heads of state.

A specific instruction to use general terms for heads of state when the title varies with the incumbent was introduced with the 1967 rules (although the 1949 examples already illustrated the use of such terms). In 1978 the wording of this instruction was changed slightly to indicate that this should be done when the title varies specifically with the sex of the incumbent.

Ruling Executive Bodies

The proposal incorporates ruling executive bodies into the combined instruction for heads of state and heads of government. A ruling executive body is a government corporate body, which we believe could simply be established according to the general instructions for government corporate bodies. However, since 19.2.1.1.1(f)(ii) reads: “for decrees of a head of state, chief executive, or ruling executive body”, we have included them in this proposal for consistency.

Extending Use of the Official Language of the Jurisdiction to Heads of State

We propose to combine RDA 11.2.2.21.1 and 11.2.2.21.2 and specify the use of the language of the jurisdiction to record the title of heads of state. Below are listed some of the presidents of Uruguay currently established in the LC/NAF, sorted as they appear in an alphabetical display in a typical catalog.

Uruguay. President (1931–1938 : Terra)
Uruguay. President (1967–1972 : Pacheco Areco)
Uruguay. President (1985–1990 : Sanguinetti)
Uruguay. President (1995–2000 : Sanguinetti)

Under this proposal, the Spanish term replaces the English term, and the order of the list remains the same:

Uruguay. Presidente (1931–1938 : Terra)
Uruguay. Presidente (1967–1972 : Pacheco Areco)
Uruguay. Presidente (1985–1990 : Sanguinetti)
Uruguay. Presidente (1995–2000 : Sanguinetti)

We recognize that in some cases, when the resource being cataloged is in a language other than that of the jurisdiction, it may be difficult to determine what term should be used. Catalogers may need to establish authorized access points provisionally until the correct term in the language of the jurisdiction can be identified.

Mongolia. President (1997–2005 : Bagabandi)

[established provisionally until correct term can be identified]

Titles That Vary with the Gender of the Incumbent

Using the official language of the jurisdiction, as we currently do for heads of government and propose to do for heads of state, introduces variations not encountered when English terms are used. The title used for the office varies with the gender of the incumbent in many languages. The following two access points are constructed according to the current instructions for heads of government:

Germany. Bundeskanzler (1990–1998 : Kohl)
Germany. Bundeskanzlerin (2005– : Merkel)

[The second name is not yet established in the NACO authority file, but the feminine form is used in official documents.]

These variations have not yet appeared in many established names for heads of government, but they would be more common for heads of state. Many jurisdictions have had both male and female monarchs over the course of their history. These variations are not currently reflected in access points for heads of state because the provision in the current instruction requires the cataloger to use a general term in these cases.

The AACR2 instruction to use a general term in English for heads of state when the title varies by gender produces a list of names in chronological order when the title does not vary in other ways. Since the structure of the access point is Jurisdiction. Title (date-date : Name), they sort by the first date. RDA changes the instruction to use “the language preferred by the agency creating the data (unless there is no equivalent term in that language)” but will also produce a chronologically ordered file if the term used by the agency creating the data is consistent for all incumbents.

Examples constructed using a general term according to the current instructions, with English as the language preferred by the agency creating the data (the second and third are included as examples in the current text of RDA):

Spain. Sovereign (1814–1833 : Ferdinand VII)

Spain. Sovereign (1833–1868 : Isabella II)

Spain. Sovereign (1975– : Juan Carlos I)

[Use of a general term produces a chronologically ordered list; if the English words King and Queen were used, the order of the second and third headings would be reversed.]

If it is important to keep this chronological order, a single general term in the language of the jurisdiction could be used in some cases to replace the current general term in English.

However, for languages with no gender-neutral term, and for languages unknown to the cataloger, determining such a term would be challenging. Believing that chronological order is not a matter of paramount concern, we propose to remove the instruction to use a general term for establishing the access point for individual heads of state, and use the gender-specific term appropriate for each. As a result the order will be affected.

Spain. Reina (1833–1868 : Isabella II)

Spain. Rey (1814–1833 : Ferdinand VII)

Spain. Rey (1975– : Juan Carlos I)

The above solution will not be applicable to authorized access points covering multiple incumbents of the head of state position when the title varies with the gender of the incumbent, or to those for joint rulers. These access points are needed for compilations of official communications of more than one holder of an office (6.31.1.4). For these instances we suggest that a neutral term that applies to both genders be used, in the official language of the jurisdiction if such a term can be readily determined; otherwise use a term in the language preferred by the agency creating the data.

Great Britain. Sovereign [term representing kings and queens collectively]

Spain. Monarca [term representing kings and queens collectively]

Spain. Monarca (1479–1504 : Ferdinand V and Isabella I) [joint ruler]

Effects of the Proposed Revision

The proposed revision will significantly disturb the current chronological order produced for many existing names when they are sorted alphabetically in OPAC display. However, if the title of the head of state has varied historically for reasons other than gender, the chronological order is disrupted even under current instructions. For example, all the presidents of France currently index before the earlier kings, because “France. President” precedes “France. Sovereign” in an alphabetically ordered display. So even now we do not have perfectly chronological sequences of headings for all jurisdictions.

List generated for selected French heads of state by current instructions:

France. President (1969–1974 : Pompidou)
France. Sovereign
France. Sovereign (1774–1792 : Louis XVI)
France. Sovereign (1814–1824 : Louis XVIII)
France. Sovereign (1824–1830 : Charles X)
France. Sovereign (1830–1848 : Louis-Philippe)
France. Sovereign (1852–1870 : Napoleon III)
France. Sovereign (923–936 : Raoul)

List generated for the same heads of state by the proposed instructions:

France. Empereur
France. Empereur (1852–1870 : Napoleon III)
France. Président (1969–1974 : Pompidou)
France. Roi
France. Roi (1774–1792 : Louis XVI)
France. Roi (1814–1824 : Louis XVIII)
France. Roi (1824–1830 : Charles X)
France. Roi (1830–1848 : Louis-Philippe)
France. Roi (923–936 : Raoul)

RDA Examples Affected by the Proposed Change

An example at 6.31.1.2:

Canada. Sovereign (1952– : Elizabeth II). Speech by Her Majesty the Queen in reply to the Prime Minister, Parliament Hill, Ottawa, Wednesday, September 26, 1984
Authorized access point for: Speech by Her Majesty the Queen in reply to the Prime Minister, Parliament Hill, Ottawa, Wednesday, September 26, 1984

would change to:

Canada. Queen (1952– : Elizabeth II). Speech by Her Majesty the Queen in reply to the Prime Minister, Parliament Hill, Ottawa, Wednesday, September 26, 1984
Authorized access point for: Speech by Her Majesty the Queen in reply to the Prime Minister, Parliament Hill, Ottawa, Wednesday, September 26, 1984

An example at 11.2.2.19:

Norway. Sovereign

would change to:

Norway. Monark

An example at 19.2.1.3:

France. Sovereign (1774–1792 : Louis XVI)

Louis XVI, King of France, 1754–1793

Authorized access points representing the official and the person issuing the communication for: Proclamation du roi, pour la conservation des forêts & bois: du 3 novembre 1789. An official communication of King Louis XVI

would change to:

France. Roi (1774–1792 : Louis XVI)

Louis XVI, King of France, 1754–1793

Authorized access points representing the official and the person issuing the communication for: Proclamation du roi, pour la conservation des forêts & bois: du 3 novembre 1789. An official communication of King Louis XVI

Advantages of the Proposed Change

Using the language of the jurisdiction for heads of states has the advantage of being consistent with current practice not only for heads of government, but for all other names established subordinately to a jurisdiction. It will lead to more consistent results in international application of the instructions. Including ruling executive bodies in this instruction provides instructions previously omitted from RDA.

The current instructions in RDA require the cataloger to determine first whether the official in question is a head of state or a head of government and then to apply the appropriate instruction in constructing the access point. This step is removed by using the same instruction for both, simplifying the process of creating access points for these officials.

Disadvantages of the Proposed Change

Unlike with other government departments, etc., resources naming a head of state or head of government are less likely to name them in a formal and consistent way. It is not always easy for a cataloger to determine the proper title in a foreign language or a different culture, nor to determine whether the title varies with the gender of the incumbent, and if so, to find an appropriate neutral term. The titles used in RDA access points are a formalized shorthand in any case. For example, the full title of Queen Elizabeth is “Her Majesty Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and of Her other Realms and Territories, Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith.” This proposal will create inconsistencies in some cases between the access points for a single holder of an office and joint or multiple holders of an office, as well as inconsistencies between male and female holders of an office.

Editorial Issue

The instructions in this proposal contain three instances of the phrase “person applying the instructions”. We are proposing to delete one of these instructions (see 11.2.2.21.2, last paragraph). In the other two instances (11.2.2.21.1, last paragraph, and 11.2.2.21.3, last paragraph), we propose to add the word “by” before “applying”. We raised the general question with the JSC, and suggested either adding a comma, the word “by” or both. Whatever decision the JSC makes on this editorial issue will need to be applied to the instances in this proposal.
